

Amazon driver delivers package

Today a local Amazon driver delivered a package to the front door of a house. While seemingly mundane, this created much controversy throughout the town. This is what the recipient of the package had to say: “This is an abomination. The packaging was absolutely abhorrent. There were multiple rips across the package, it came to me all wrinkled. Was the thing I ordered perfectly fine? Yes, but that's not the point. We cannot stand for such poor packaging, can we?” -The package recipient.

The neighbor's response

Along with the package recipient, we also got the chance to interview the neighbors, and this is what they had to say. “It was a very scary experience, really. The Amazon driver drove into the neighborhood, which was normal, however when he exited the vehicle we noticed something very strange. What was so strange? I'm not sure, why do you ask?” - The neighbor. The other neighbors refused to answer questions at this time.

The Amazon driver

After much searching, we were able to locate the whereabouts of the Amazon driver, and we pulled him aside for questioning. We asked him why the packages were delivered in such bad condition, to which he replied “You'll have to ask my manager”. The manager in question was never found.
